A Growing Crisis

Every day children are removed from their homes due to parental drug abuse and neglect. In the U.S. alone, nearly 687,000 children spend time in the foster care system each year.

Most of these children are left with nothing of their own—they lose their parents, homes, clothes, and toys.

What We Can Do Together

It's My Very Own (IMVO), a faith-based, voluntary organization, seeks to make kids' lives a little brighter by working with communities to provide displaced children Bags of Love that meet their immediate needs.

Each bag of love includes a handmade quilt, stuffed animal, toys, books, and personal items. The bags are age and gender appropriate, and are delivered to the local agencies charged with removing children from unsafe homes.

"I couldn't have had a successful placement without your bags of love. Your bags are special and they cover all the bases!"
